

Serving the Needs of the Deaf Community

Plans are underway for the Rochester View Apartments, a 60-unit affordable housing project designed to serve the area's deaf population which will be located in Henrietta, New York. Although funding has not yet been finalized, DePaul is collaborating with the deaf community, the town of Henrietta, SWBR Architects, P.C., Rochester Deaf Club, Deaf Housing Advisory Committee, Finger Lakes Health Systems Agency, Woodcrest Commons, a DePaul Senior Living Community, the Monroe County Office of the Aging and St. John's Home in preparation for the future.

"We'll be applying for funding through New York State Housing and Community Renewal (NYSHCR)," said Gillian Conde, Vice President of DePaul Key Housing. "This project is a priority for DePaul."

This isn't DePaul's first foray into serving the deaf community. In 1981, DePaul opened a 14-bed community residence and has continued to serve the population ever since.

"The idea for the Henrietta project resulted from a conversation I had with staff who serve our deaf consumers," said Conde of the newest DePaul project. "We discussed how nice it is to have a community of people who are deaf, who can communicate, in a site that incorporates specialized safety features. I was interested in understanding the level of isolation that people feel and the need for community in order to feel integrated into your surroundings."

According to a recent report by the Rochester Institute of Technology, there are 43,000 deaf or hard-of-hearing residents in the Rochester metro area, which is slightly above the national average. Many providers in Henrietta offer enhanced services for the deaf, Conde said, so the town seemed like the perfect location for an affordable housing project geared toward that population.

"We look forward to providing this much-needed housing option for persons who are deaf, knowing the positive difference it will make," said DePaul President Mark Fuller.

Conde began floating the idea of affordable deaf housing last year. The project was highlighted during Rochester Deaf Awareness Week in September.

"We're not building this for the deaf community but with the deaf community," said Conde. "We have to know what people want."

Under the current design, the 60 one- and two-bedroom apartments will include open floor plans with high levels of visibility, strategic lighting, safety lights on appliances such as the garbage disposal, faucet, doorbell, video conferencing and calling, and pillows that vibrate during a fire alarm. Slated to be constructed on five acres of land on West Henrietta Road next to Woodcrest Commons, a DePaul Senior Living Community, the affordable housing project may also be equipped for deaf residents with low vision.

SWBR Architects, P.C. has a senior technical coordinator on staff who is deaf and is helping with the design. Christa Construction will be the general contractor. DePaul Key Housing board member and NTID Support Faculty, Diane Cinney, has also been assisting with the Rochester View Apartments project.

Joe Gibbons, Principal with SWBR Architects, P.C., said the firm has worked with the deaf community regarding housing specific to their needs, but that project never came to fruition.

"Sometimes things don't work out, but opportunities seem to come around again," said Gibbons. "We pulled the information from those initial meetings and are using that to kick-start the design process."

The grant application from NYSHCR is expected in the fall.

"Historically, DePaul likes to be out in front of things, so we hope to have a lot of the design concepts completed and ready for the application," said Gibbons.

DePaul celebrated the recent opening of the newly-renovated DePaul Neighborhood of the Arts (NOTA) Apartments on University Avenue in Rochester, New York with an open house. The mixed-use housing campus includes 51 New York State Office of Mental Health-licensed beds and nine affordable apartments. SWBR Architects, P.C. designed the project and LECESE Construction was the construction manager. The project was funded in part by HOME funds from the city of Rochester, New York State Homes and Community Renewal (NYSHCR), and a donation from First Niagara Bank. "We are delighted to be a vital part of the NOTA community and are pleased to provide quality housing to people in need," said Mark Fuller, President, DePaul.

Meet Gerald S. By Justine Smith

Everyone has their own definition of independence, and for Gerald S., it's about fully enjoying "little things" that most of us take for granted. His road to independence began when he joined DePaul in 2000, graduating from Continuing Day Treatment (CDT) to several DePaul community residences to his current residence, the DePaul Neighborhood of the Arts (NOTA) Apartments. Although his decision to enter DePaul was a difficult one, Gerald professes that it has ultimately changed his life. "No one wants to be mentally ill, but once I got over the barrier of being angry and frustrated, I started learning the skills necessary to maintain my life and gain independence," he stated with conviction.

His high level of self-sufficiency allows him to participate in the activities he loves the most; you can often find him taking a peaceful walk around the "artsy and welcoming" neighborhood, whipping up a pan of his specialty, lasagna, or cheering on his favorite team, the Buffalo Bills. Gerald also enjoys his freedom and spends time with friends, because "mental illness can be a lonely disease and to have connections with other people is necessary," he said.

Gerald's ultimate goal is to acquire his own apartment through the DePaul Supported Housing program. He is confident in himself and his goal. "DePaul has given me encouragement and structure, but it has also given me hope."

The Long Road to Recovery

Seated in her kitchenette at a table adorned with a vase of colorful flowers from a friend's garden, Ricki C. reflects on the long and winding path that led her to DePaul's Ridgeview Commons Treatment Apartment Program. An old photograph hanging on the refrigerator is a reminder of just how far she's come.

The picture of Ricki and her two sisters at a wedding dates back to her first attempt at recovery. She was 30 at the time with just one year of sobriety under her belt. She still remembers being ashamed because she did not have a dress appropriate for the occasion and was forced to borrow one.

"What keeps me sober now is that I remember what it did to me before," she said. "They say remember the worst before you pick up the first drink."

Now 56, Ricki is close to celebrating five years of sobriety and keeping her mental health in check. She's well-spoken, optimistic and not afraid to talk about her struggles with schizoaffective disorder and addiction in hopes of helping dispell the myths and stigmas associated with mental illness. Living on her own since she was 19, Ricki furthered her education at Monroe Community College and Bryant and Stratton, and also worked as a bank teller.

"They didn't like a hungover bank teller," she said, so she was fired.

As her mother would have said, there's always a silver lining to every cloud. Ricki qualified for disability and achieved 22 years of sobriety. When she lost her health care, she relapsed again. Eventually, Ricki was arrested and wound up in the hospital for over three months.

Before coming to DePaul, Ricki was involved with the Rochester Psychiatric Centers' Family Care program. A little over three years ago, she moved into Edgerton Square, a DePaul Single Room Occupancy Program.

Since then, she's graduated from DePaul JobZone - a Personalized Recovery Oriented Services \(PROS\) Program, accomplishing her goal of moving into her own apartment. She moved into Ridgeview Commons in May.

"It was hard work on everyone's part," she said. "I feel a sense of accomplishment. I feel at ease now."

Ricki said she is enjoying her independence and a place to call her own where she can do more painting, her passion. "My artwork gave me self-assurance and self-confidence," she said.

Ricki has been using Recovery International, a mental health, self-help organization, and surrounding herself with sober people as much as possible.

DePaul has been good to her, Ricki said, from helping her secure her own apartment and self-medicating, right down to moving her belongings from Edgerton Square to Ridgeview Commons.

"I don't take anything for granted," she said. "Each day is a blessing. Even though I'm not super religious, I know there are blessings in life, especially with people like those at DePaul around."

Home Improvements to Benefit Residents

Chatham Commons, a DePaul Senior Living Community in Cary, North Carolina acquired in 2006, is wrapping up a renovation project. Improvements include updates to residents' rooms and bathrooms, and new furnishings in the bedrooms, and dining, living and activity areas. A new 2,500-square-foot addition includes new living, dining and activities rooms. Thirty assisted living beds were also converted to memory care beds. In addition, Chatham Commons received a new beauty salon, wellness station, medication room, Memory Care Coordinator office and an outdoor courtyard.

Built in 1983, the 80-bed community is the oldest of all of DePaul's facilities in North Carolina. Chatham Commons underwent a fairly extensive renovation in 2009 involving entrance areas, corridors and common spaces.

Other DePaul Senior Living Communities will begin renovations in the coming months. Acquired in 1999, Hickory Village, a 56-bed community solely dedicated to providing memory care in Hickory, North Carolina, will receive aesthetic improvements starting this fall, as will Westwood Commons, a DePaul Senior Living Community in North Chili.

“We’re excited about the opportunity to provide affordable, quality memory care services for the residents of Cary and the surrounding community,” said Regional Director Melissa Silverman-Connolly. “Residents and families appreciate the new look and visitors are impressed as well.”

The Universal Language of Music

It's mid-afternoon and a crowd has gathered in the front foyer of Cornerstone, a DePaul Single Room Occupancy Program. In the spotlight is resident Jim K. With his eyes trained on his left hand forming a semi-circle around the neck of the guitar and his fingers settling on the frets to make notes, Jim easily strums some chords for his eager audience.

"How about a Beatles song, Jim?," one resident requests.

Perhaps it's because they share a name, but Jim prefers the music of Jimi Hendrix. Jim has long had an interest in music, especially the guitar. He recently received an acoustic guitar donated by a generous person in the community who heard about Jim's wish to have one.

"He's always had an interest in music," said Jim's brother Timothy. "He's had radios and things he can listen to music with and over the years he's encouraged many friends to play the guitar. It helps increase his concentration."

Jim's former Residential Service Coordinator (RCS) Melissa Corkish said the instrument helps Jim focus.

"This is truly an honor, not just for me as his RCS, but to see Jim's growth since receiving his guitar," she said. "It's allowed him to strive a little harder each day and to escape into his own world when he's playing music, which he so loves and enjoys."

Jim can't read music, so he plays by ear. He's set a goal to learn how to play the guitar even more proficiently. The next step is arranging for lessons which will hopefully be taught pro-bono.

When asked how having the guitar makes him feel, Jim replied, "like I'm on B-flat."
